Second Photographers: How Many Do We Freakin' Need?

You've Heard Some Unconvincing Arguments.

Many couples don't understand why they need to include a 2nd photographer in their packages. Is this a way for studios to sell you something else you don't need?

All Wedding Collections Include a 2nd Photographer...

But Tav Images Photography collections are highly customizable because I don't believe people should pay for stuff they don't need or want.

You don't need one if:

1. Your fiancé really doesn't like photos, and you don't really care about their "getting ready" photos.
2. You have a simple wedding ceremony.
3. You don't have a lot of guests.
4. You don't really care too much about guest coverage.

Here's why you need one:

1. You want photos of your fiancé getting ready (Tav stays with the bride).
2. You have a Jewish wedding - sometimes angles under the chuppah can be tough with all your family members under there. One photographer running from side to side is super distracting for your guests. Having 2 covers all angles.
3. You have over 75 guests and you want as much guest coverage as possible. I still can't guarantee 100% guest coverage with 2 photographers, but it's way closer than just one photographer. Under 75 guests, I can handle that solo.
